

Creating Learning Culture in a Workplace

99%

LinkedIn Workplace Learning Report 2020 shows that 99% of learning and development professionals agree that their organizations will be negatively impacted if their employees do not gain the required skills

Continuous development of knowledge and competence is at the heart of an organization that has developed a learning culture.

94% of employees say that they would stay at a company longer, if there is an investment in their learning and development

-LinkedIn Workplace Learning Report 2019

84% of employees in the best-performing organizations receive the training they need

-IBM

30% of workers in the UK have not received formal workplace training in the last five years

- City & Guilds' annual skills index 2021

L&D professionals agree that learning and development has a seat at the executive table.

- LinkedIn Workplace Learning Report 2021

71.9% L&D professionals agree that their companies will be developing more custom learning content in the upcoming years

- Chief Learning Officer 2020 Learning States of the Industry survey,

How can organizations meet their changing needs? How can they succeed in the changing environments? Learning culture is the solution for a successful business in times of change.

